

Community Wildfire Safety Program Portable Battery Program

Support for Income-Qualified Medical Baseline Customers in High Fire-Threat District Areas

PG&E is continuing our collaboration with community organizations to assist qualifying customers who depend on power for medical equipment.

The Portable Battery Program

PG&E's Portable Battery Program provides backup batteries to lessen the impact of Public Safety Power Shutoff (PSPS) events on customers who rely on medical devices. In 2020, PG&E collaborated with community-based organizations to provide more than 5,500 portable batteries. This year, PG&E is continuing to work with five Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program providers and Richard Heath and Associates to deliver additional batteries.

Program partners will reach out to eligible customers to conduct a phone or email assessment. The assessment will survey customer emergency preparedness plans and medical device information to match the customer with the best battery available for their needs.

Key Information

Qualifying customers must be enrolled in Medical Baseline and CARE or FERA.*

Approved batteries will be delivered directly to the customer's home.

Customers who need additional support during a PSPS event may be referred to the Disability Disaster Access & Resources Program.

*Must also reside in a High Fire-Threat District or have experienced two or more PSPS events.
